 To smother flight, and shoots upon her wings. Dryden.

The broken air loud whistling as she flies,
 She stops and listens, and shoots forth again,
 And guides her pinions by her young ones cries. Dryden.

Heav'n's imperious queen shot down from high,
 At her approach the brazen hinges fly,
 The gates are forc'd. Dryden.

She downward glides,
 Lights in Fleet-ditch, and shoots beneath the tides. Gay.

Where the mob gathers, swiftly shot along,
 Nor idly mingle in the noisy throng. Gay.

At the summons roll'd her eyes around,
 Not hat' so swiftly shoots along in air,
 The gliding lightning. Pope.

9. To feel a quick pain.
 SHOOT. n. f. [from the verb.]

1. The act or impression of any thing emitted from a distance.
 The Turkish bow giveth a very terrible shoot, inasmuch as the arrow, hath pierced a steel target two inches thick; but the arrow if headed with wood, hath been known to pierce thro' a piece of wood of eight inches thick. Bacon.

2. The act of striking, or endeavouring to strike with a missile weapon discharged by any instrument.
 The noise of thy cross-bow
 Will scare the herd, and so my shoot is lost. Shakespeare.

But come the bow; now mercy goes to kill,
 And shooting well is then accounted ill.
 Thus will I save my credit in the shoot,
 Not wounding, pity would not let me do't. Shakespeare.

As a country fellow was making a shoot at a pigeon, he trode upon a snake that bit him. LeStrange.

3. [Scheuten, Dutch.] Ensnarings issuing from the main flock.

 And next, to reconcile the shooter God,
 Within her hollow fides the sacrifice he stow'd. Dryden.

SHOP. n. f. [recomp. Saxon, a magazine; schoppe, French;
shoppe, low Latin.] A shop.

1. A place where any thing is sold.
 Our windows are broke down,
 And we for fear compell'd to shut our shop. Shakespeare.

Your most grave belly thus answer'd;
 True is it, my incorporate friends,
 That I receive the general food at first,
 Which you do live upon; and so it is,
 Because I am the store-house and the shop
 Of the whole body. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

In his mood, shop a tortoise hung
 An alligator stuff, and other skins
 Of ill-tam'd fithes; and about his shelves
 A beggarly account of empty boxes. Shakespeare.

Scarcely any fold in shop could be relied on as faithfully prepared. Boyle.

His shop is his element, and he cannot with any enjoyment of himself live out of it. South's Sermons.

 sheep shorn.

SHORN. The participle passive of shoar.
 So rose the Danite strong,
 Shorn of his strength. Milton.

Vile shrubs are shorn for browze: the tow'ring height
 Of unctuous trees are torches for the night. Dryden.

He plunging downward shot his radiant head;
 Disspell'd the breathing air that broke his flight;
 Shorn of his beams, a man to mortal fight. Dryden.

SHOR'L. adj. [recomp. Saxon.]

1. Not long; commonly not long enough.
 Weak though I am of limb, and short of sight,
 Far from a lynx, and not a giant quite,
 I'll do what Mead and Chelidon advise,
 To keep these limbs, and to preserve these eyes. Pope.

2. Not long in space or extent.
 This left voluble earth,
 By shorter flight to the east, had left him there. Milton.
